

Taken from the German book:
Winkler, Hartmut: Docuverse – Zur Medientheorie der Computer. München: Boer 1997,
<https://homepages.uni-paderborn.de/winkler/Winkler--Docuverse.pdf>

Hartmut Winkler

Docuverse

On the media theory of computers.

Content:

Introduction	9
1. The metaphor of the ‘network’ and the model of language	14
What drives media history?	14
Computer, writing, language	18
The network metaphor in linguistic theory	28
Networks in the computer	39
The utopia of an ‘externalization’ of language	48
Addendum to the concept of externalization	52
2. A data universe?	54
Accessibility as utopia	54
Unification fantasies	55
Global Village and Noosphere	64
Media-historical precursors	72
Conclusions for the data universe	75
3. Memory machines	81
Anti-mechanistic theories of memory and mechanistic theories of technology?	81
Individual memory	84
Collective memory	91
Technology, evolution, and collective memory	101
Current approaches	109
Collective memory, technology, language, computers	119

4. Condensation	131
Reproduction without loss	131
Mnemopathy	132
Forgetting and condensation	143
Theory of signification	156
Semiotic conclusions:
condensation, language, discourse and system	164
[available in English: homepages.uni-paderborn.de/winkler/Winkler--Docuverse--Ch-4-Condensation--Excerpt.pdf
Condensation and computers	172
5. Visual media and computers	185
Problems in the conception of media history	185
A crisis of images?	191
Language crisis around 1900
- shuddering at social mediation and arbitrariness	192
Language crisis: 'The theory of two minds'	201
Technical images	206
The crisis of images	209
Computer	213
6. Isolation - on the theory of the digital	223
Transparency utopias	223
Isolation, first clarification	229
Isolated things, isolated signs	229
First counter-term: context	243
Criticism of isolation: Artificial intelligence	248
Holistic counter-positions	257
Media	264
Semiotic perspective	268
Isolation and context	268
Identity versus 'articulation'	269
Articulation:
Theory of technology, the role of man and of history	278
Is the context lockable?	281
The sign process as an interaction of identity and context	286
Cultural studies perspective	291
Fort-Da-Spiel, separation and rejection	291
The role of dirt and the amorphous	301
Gender conflict	309
Gender conflict:
life practice, thinking styles, mentalities	315

Reference back to the media	318
The medium of isolation	321
7. Conclusion: Strategy in the realm of wishes	331
Literature	339
Geert Lovink
The computer: Medium or calculating machine?
An encounter on the net with Hartmut Winkler	355
[homepages.uni-paderborn.de/winkler/ Winkler--The-Computer--Medium-or-Calculating-Machine.pdf]	